

Class of IAHSI – 2020

Karen J. Day

Karen J. Day, PhD, is a senior lecturer in health informatics at the University of Auckland. She trained as a general nurse and midwife and her PhD in information systems confirmed her role in health informatics. She is the former director of postgraduate health informatics studies. She is an elected Board member of Health Informatics New Zealand and holds a number of informatics governance positions. She conducts research on consumer perspectives. Full bio. (please insert this link to my bio <https://unidirectory.auckland.ac.nz/profile/k-day>)