Prashila Dullabh

Prashila is a Vice President, Senior Fellow and the Director of the Health Implementation Science Center at NORC at the University of Chicago. Her work lies at the intersection of informatics and policy, and the use of innovative technologies in health care delivery and research. She leads NORC's portfolio of work on informatics and patient-centered outcomes research. These projects emphasize development of the data infrastructure necessary for robust, patient-centered research and evidence generation, and dissemination of research knowledge through technical solutions like clinical decision support tools. Prashila holds a medical degree from the University of Witwatersrand in South Africa.
